process of discovering the meaning of each one of the ritual acts gave us an idea of the ritual idiom of Coorgs.

Solidarity rites are performed on the subject of mangala, and each mangala marks a change in the subject's social personality. Thus the ear-boring mangala marked the attainment of adulthood by a youth. His social personality altered again at marriage as he then acquired new rights and duties.

A man who killed a panther or tiger in a hunt was entitled to mangala being performed. A man who had built a new house performed mané or house mangala, at which mūrta was performed to him.

Polé kaṇḍa mangaḷa was performed to a girl some time after she had attained puberty. This corresponded to a boy's ear-boring mangala. Marriage is another mangala occasion for her and, formerly, mangala was performed to her in the fifth or seventh month of her first pregnancy. This marked the attainment of the status of a mother by her. Motherhood is a valued status, and a woman who gave birth to ten children, all of whom were alive, was the subject of a mangala ceremony known as paitāṇḍek aḷapa.

A child is ritually given a name on the eleventh day of birth, but this does not constitute a mangala as the child does not count socially till either the ear-boring or puberty mangala has been performed.

Mangala is confined to auspicious occasions, and this is the reason why the ritual disposal of a corpse does not assume the form of a mangala.

Mangala carries with it the approval of society. This is brought out clearly in certain cases. For instance, the marriage of a widow does not constitute a mangala, while the marriage of a widower does. This is because Coorgs, like Brahmins and other high castes, do not approve of the marriage of a widow. But in the case of Coorgs the disapproval is not sufficiently strong to prohibit altogether the marriage of a widow, as it is among the Brahmins.

When a man killed a panther, mangala was performed for him on the village green (ūr-mandu), whereas it was performed for him on the nāḍ green if he killed a tiger. Killing a tiger is worthy of more honour than killing a panther.

When the youthful hero Kaiyandira Appayya killed the great fighter Chōndu and thus restored the prestige of Kaḍiyetnāḍ, the general approval with which Appayya's action was regarded expressed itself in a mangala being performed for him.
